Detailed Findings

1. Saigon TexCo concentration risk

70% of finished-goods spend with one supplier is unhealthy. The Tet 2026 capacity-share situation (see operational memo from Marco Ferraro, May 5) demonstrates that we cannot rely on contracted lead times when their priority customers consolidate. Recommendation: qualify a second nylon-capable supplier in calendar 2026. NOTE: this work is currently paused due to the VP Ops vacancy.

2. Bandung Crafted: no signed MSA

Operating under verbal terms set up by Maya Lin (now departed) on a per-PO Net-30 / FOB Jakarta basis. Priya Iyer is drafting a formal MSA. Until signed, treat as month-to-month relationship with no indemnification, no IP protection, no QC commitments.

3. AMD Developer Cloud: no documented owner

We have an active GPU spend on AMD Developer Cloud (BrainOS prototyping, ML pipeline training) but the vendor account ownership is unclear. Tomas Becker raised this in #general on May 4, 2026. Action: Sai Krishnan to formally claim ownership and document in the Vendor Registry by May 15.

Open questions for the brain to resolve

1. Who is the AMD Developer Cloud account owner today? 2. Are we enrolled in the AMD AI Developer Program? Required for hackathon credits. 3. Has the Bandung Crafted MSA been signed yet? 4. What is the formal lead-time agreement with Saigon TexCo as of the November renewal?
